

From: harrytolen@attbi.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/25/02 10:28am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Constantly incorporating new functionality into an operating system is a real benefit to the consumer and I hope that the government doesn't take it away. I have purchased communications software in the past and I am glad that I don't have to do that any more. For Netscape and other competitors to argue that they should have been able to gouge me for their products when I could get a better product built into my operating system is idiotic and anti-consumer. If I was determined to use them I could have downloaded them or gotten Linux and written my own...but I didn't. The vast majority of the American consumer marketplace wants service and convenience and Microsoft's dominance is due to their success at meeting those wants and needs. Leave them alone.